One of the boldest "war" speech yet heard in Congress was delivered oday by Representative A. P. Gardne of Massachusetts, who unhesitatingly placed himself on the pro-ally side of the European argument and told the would be nothing but an armed trucemind toward the German policies was disclosed when he declared against Germany's grasp," and when he urged Our Ambition Germany's grasp, and when he diged the country not to "encourage pillage, savagery and infidelity by showing the world that a nation may violate every

"Upon my word, I think the German-American is the best man of them all. reasoning is simple, and from his point of view it is sound. 'Ammunition,' says he, 'helps the allies; so, by hook or by crook, by laws or by strikes, by gold or by dynamite, by torpedo or by mine, let us do what we can to keep ammunition from reaching our enemies. "But our pacifist friend! See where his doctrine is carrying him! His hatred of militarism would halt the very arms which are striving to destroy militarism. If he had his way he would paralyze the only force in the universe which stands between him and the tender mercies of armed autocracy. "Peace, cried the pacifist, 'peace at any price, peace at the German price! Arbitration! Compromise! Anything for peace."

in adopting this doctrine of 'surround-ing fact?' If we are to eliminate the Inequality caused by the British fleet

Gardner highly complimented Secretary Lansing on his note to Austria of August 12, 1915, in which the view of this country was given on the subject of the legality, morality and wisdom of permitting American citizens to export munitions of war.

Then Representative Gardner said:
"Has anything happened to change the stituation in 150 days? Yes, indeed. Congress has assembled, and three groups of men are demanding the engatement of a law to stop the export of manufacture of a law to stop the export of love for the fatherland; the conton king foins in the chorus out of love for the fatherland; the conton king foins in the chorus out of love for the fatherland; the conton on the subject of the pacifist, be coal and iron resources? In order to stop the war we Americans, so far as we have the power, are to shear France of her defense against the ferocity which has turned fair Belgium into a charnel house."

As to the situation confronting the country arising from torpedoed "liners." Representative Gardner said: "No promise is made as to the safety of the passengers, no indication is youch-safed that any merchant ships event. safed that any merchant ships except liners' will receive warning.

York Times Five Days

ONE OF THE FOUNDERS

Many Years Owner of the St. Louis Republic, Which He Inherited

Welborne Knapp, formerly editor and who became treasurer of the New York Times Company last Monday, died of seated at his desk in the Times office. Less than ten minutes before he had been in conversation with associates and apparently was in the best of health.

He was found dead by his assistant who had left the office only a few mo ments before. A stenographer about to enter his office to have him sign letters he had dictated acknowledging messages of congratulations from friends who wished him success in his new duties.

Died at His Desk.

Knapp, who was sixty-eight years of age, had been connected for forty-eight years with the St. Louis Republic, which was owned by his father and his uncle before he suc ceeded them in control of the property. Announcement of his retirement from that paper was made December 24 last.

Mr. Knapp had attended an editorial council of the Times at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon and went from there immediately to his office. He evidently died instantly. The door was open between his office and another office which was occupied, but no sound from him was heard. He was found lying back in his chair, pen in hand. Mr. Walter Anderton, a cousin of Mr. Knapp, was notified and the body was taken to Dr. Anderton's home. After the news had been broken to Mrs. Knapp, who was ill with grip, she was taken to the Anderton residence. Mr. Announcement of his retirement from Knapp leaves one daughter, the wif of Dr. Guthrie McConnell of Waterloo of Dr. Gutnrie McConneil of Waterloo, Iowa, and three sisters, Mrs. Alice Almy of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. John Dor-rance of Houston, Tex., and Mrs. George L. Bloomfield of New Orleans.

Mr. Knapp was a member of the poard of directors and of the executive which he was one of the founders and Notice of funeral hereafter. committee of the Associated Press, of incorporators. He was a member of the Western Associated Press, which was succeeded in 1892 by the Associated Press of Illinois. He was a di-rector and in 1900 president of the latter organization, which later became the present Associated Press, of which he was one of the most active and efficient officials. He also was one of the founders and incorporators of the CAHILL. Sacred to the memory of my dear American Newspaper Publishers' Assolife eleves years ago today, January 7. American Newspaper Publishers' Asso-ciation and was for a time its president.
Mr. Knapp's body will be taken to St.

Louis for burial, but the funeral ar angements have not been completed. Highly Esteemed in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, January 7.—Charles Weiborne Knapp was the last newspaper man in the famous Knapp family that had been closely identified with the progress of American journalism since He was born in St. Louis Janu ary 23, 1848, the son of John and Virrinia (Wright) Knapp. When yet a boy his father began "breaking him in and he spent the whole of his life hereafter in active newspaper work He was 'graduated' from St. Louis University when eighteen years old, and two years later received the A. M. degree at the same institution and an LL. B. from the University of Kentucky. In the same year he entered the service of the Republic as a reporter, and a few years later became editor of the Weekly Republican. In 1887 he assumed the presidency of the George Knapp & Co., whose publication the next year became known as the Republic.

The spirit of his work as an editor was summed up in his words to a newity engaged editorial writer: "I want no man to express any views in his writing here with which he is not himself in cordial sympathy."

He became president of the publishing company in 1887, and his resignation to accept the treasurership of the New York Times was announced in the Republic in the mortning edition of December 24, 1915. He continued a member of the Republic directorate.

Mr. Knapp was one of the executive committee of hine that had actual direction of the Louisiana purchase exposition of 1904. He was prominent in the club life of St. Louis, and a farewell dinner in his honor, which was given at the St. Louis Club on the night of December 30, was attended by a large number of business and professional men of the city.
